Israeli Battle Looms Over Religion

In the Israel Knesset (Assembly) recently, a left-wing Assemblyman from the Opposition benches criticised the Government of Premier David Ben-Gurion for having banned the debarkation of passengers in the Haifa harbor on Saturdays.

The Government reply was given by the Minister of Immigration, Moshe Shapira, a member of the Orthodox bloc.

"Saturday is the official day of rest in the State of Israel," he said. "Let the shipping companies arrange their itineraries so that their vessels reach here on week-days."

The same week, the Marine Carp, operated by the American Export Lines, arrived with passengers on a Monday. This vessel during the last few years had arrived almost persistently on Saturdays. On almost every sailing, Jewish Sabbath-observing passengers had pleaded with the captain and cabled the rabbis in Palestine for intercession to achieve a revision of the schedule.

But nothing helped, and in her March sailing the ship again arrived on a Saturday. This time, however, the Israel Government immigration officials said that no one could land on the Sabbath. The ship rode anchor until Sunday morning with all her passengers on board. On her next sailing in April, she came in on a Monday.

Many Jews drew satisfaction from this, but others raised a question of principle: "Should the Jewish state use its sovereign powers to enforce observance of Jewish religious law?"

To what extent Jewish religious law shall be incorporated into the law of the state will be one of the [illegible] New York Times. [illegible] anti-clericals demand "freedom of belief," which they say should include freedom to disbelieve. The Orthodox maintain that individual citizens should enjoy full freedom but that the state should be bound by Biblical laws of Sabbath-observance and "kashruth" (dietary laws), and that the Government should concede to the religious courts (Jewish, Moslem or Christian) complete jurisdiction over matters of personal status, including marriage, divorce, wills and alimony.

Rabbi Judah L. Fishman, 75-year-old Minister of Religions, explained the Orthodox position. In

Report Shows Aid Increase To Immigrants

A rising volume of aid to Jewish immigrants and their children highlighted Jewish Social Services in 1948, as the communities increasingly turned their attention to the planning and construction of much-needed buildings for local services. In other fields, the upward trend of service which had characterized the earlier post-war years was somewhat stabilized, according to the preliminary report on "Jewish Social Services in 1948", prepared by the Social Planning Department of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds.

The department's analysis included reports from family and child care agencies, services to immigrants, homes for aged, and hospital clinic programs. Reports covering Jewish community centers, Jewish education and vocational services are being compiled by the specialized national agencies for these fields, and will be issued in a later publication. Figures show that the agencies continued to be affected by the post-war pattern of high costs, relatively full employment, and continuation of the housing shortage.

Jewish family agencies reported an eleven per cent increase in service to immigrant families and individuals, despite the fact that there was an overall decrease of two per cent in the total number of cases served in 1948, and a general decrease of four percent in the number of applications. Financial aid to immigrants is also on the increase, according to the report, with family agencies giving almost two-thirds of the total amount of local agency assistance to recent immigrants. In 1948, the average assistance grant per month for each of these cases was $118, as compared with $49 for non-im-

[illegible] instrumental in known [illegible] from the fact that newcomers are often not eligible for public assistance funds. Also, a much greater need is experienced by immigrants who must establish themselves in a completely new environment.

Child care agencies reported an upward swing of five per cent in the number of immigrant children receiving care. These agencies also reported extension of the trend toward foster home care for children. Service reports of 43 child care agencies showed that nearly 60 per cent of all children under their care were in family foster homes. Less than 25 per cent were in institutions, with other children remaining with parents and relatives. The

Producer Was Noted For Verbal Pledge

Joseph Jules Leventhal, for many years a New York theatrical producer and investor, died at Mount Sinai Hospital after an illness of more than three months. His age was 60. He used his middle name primarily for many years.

As a sponsor of theatrical productions Mr. Leventhal specialized in revivals. His stage ventures away from the Times Square area brought him the designation of "Atlantic Coast Circuit impresario." Productions that he sponsored included "An American Tragedy," "Whistling in the Dark," "That's Gratitude," "The Show Off," "It's a Wise Child," "Dangerous Corner," "The Two Mrs. Carrolls" and "Marinka."

Unlike most people in show business, Joseph Jules Leventhal, not only avoided the spotlight, but ordered his press agents to keep his name out of newspapers. For more than a quarter of a century his counsel and auditor were not fully aware of Mr. Leventhal's complete operations, says the New York Times.

[illegible] very little doubt, [illegible] verbiage from Austria, but built a large fortune by pyramiding theatrical concessions, burlesque, legitimate revivals and investments into first-run productions. Once when Mr. Leventhal was asked why he sometimes concealed his identity as a producer, he replied: "You can't put publicity in the bank."

Along Broadway, even among those who disliked him for driving hard bargains, Mr. Leventhal was respected for his word. He was one of the few producers who did not have to post a bond with Equity when he put on a show because his verbal pledge was considered a guarantee. Once, when involved with a company that was producing a show in Boston, he wired the actors to quit if they were not paid at the end of the first act.

Mr. Leventhal made no artistic pretensions. In one of the few articles on him, a writer said, "His aim is not to bring the theatre to the masses but the masses to the theatre."

This goal Mr. Leventhal realized by reviving the Subway Circuit, the description usually applied to shows he had revived for erstwhile movie houses in Brooklyn and the Bronx. It was often reported that to stage these revivals Mr. Leventhal paid no more than was absolutely necessary. During the depression he was quoted as telling actors: "I'll give you $40. Come into my office and we'll discuss terms."

Once in keeping expenses down he provoked objections from his subordinates who claimed the show, a musical, would be shy on costumes. Mr. Leventhal retorted: "That's the trouble. You come in and put your eyes on the chorus in the first number. You pick a little baby out. And so what? You never see her again because she's so busy changing costumes. Leave 'em all in bathing suits."

Mr. Leventhal, along with O. E. Wee, with whom he broke a partnership after several years, proved his business acumen to more widely publicized producers during the early Thirties, the depths of the depression. At that time his revivals showed substantial profits touring New England, Chicago and Washington when Broadway shows were having considerable difficulty.

Mr. Leventhal's first taste of show business was as a street pitchman when he came to America. He then became a candy butcher and later obtained concessions that led to his acquisition of a stock company in Passaic, N. J. By the time the United States entered the first World War he had a dozen troupes in the East.

After the war he expanded operations. He lost heavily in the Wall Street crash of 1929, but within a few years had recovered in the revival of business with Mr. Wee.

Mr. Leventhal lived at 800 West Forty-ninth Street. His office was at 220 West Forty-second Street.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Sadye Leventhal; two sons, Harold, a Washington attorney who is a counsel in America for Israel; and Daniel, a furniture company executive of San Francisco; and a daughter, Mrs. Gerald Albert, of New York.

MOVING SCENE MARKS U.N. ACCEPTANCE OF ISRAEL AS CROWDS CHEER AND DELEGATES EMBRACE FOREIGN MINISTER

Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett, standing at the rostrum of the General Assembly as the first Israeli delegate to the United Nations, gave his country's promise to work for peace with its Arab neighbors and for friendship with the United States and the Soviet Union.

The representative of the fifty-ninth member of the United Nations walked to the speakers' platform a few seconds after Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, Assembly President, announced Israel's admission. The crowded, emotional gallery stood and cheered as he went to the rostrum and stood and cheered afterward when he walked to the delegation table with the new sign on it.

Mr. Sharett's last words to the Assembly were from Isaiah, and he said them first in English, then in Hebrew:

"Nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war anymore."

His address came at the end of a day that saw excitement grow as the time for the vote grew near. When he was seated at his table, near the back of the huge Assembly theatre, spectators—a bearded Israeli Army officer was one — leaped the barrier to embrace him. No guards stopped him.

It was the turn of the other delegates then. Many of them had risen from their chairs to shake hands with Mr. Sharett as he walked from the rostrum to the delegation seat. When he was at his table other delegates came around to shake hands, embrace him and clap him on the back.

The crowds — the largest since the Assembly's special session began — came early for the climax of the long Israel debate. They [illegible] galleries of the Assembly, returned in even greater numbers for the beginning of the Israel discussion in the afternoon. They applauded every pro-Israel speaker loudly and sometimes with bravos but quieted quickly under Dr. Evatt's gavel.

There were few formalities to mark Israel's admission to the United Nations. In tune with the day, Mr. Sharett's speech was along simple lines.

He told his fellow-delegates that this was a great moment for Israel. It was a consummation, he said, of the journey from political anonymity to "clear identity," from "inferior to equal status," from passive protest to "active responsibility."

The State of Israel, said Mr. Sharett, claimed no allegiance from Jews in other countries but held an open door to all "Jews who need a home."

Mr. Sharett reviewed the struggle of Zionists for a national homeland and thanked the delegates that had helped give it international status, reports the New York Times.

"Peace is the very breath of Israel's existence and an indispensable condition for its growth and development," he said. "Our acceptance into the family of nations is of itself a not unhopeful omen. Both the United States and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics have joined hands in welcoming Israel into the world."

Later, Mr. Sharett repeated the policy of his Prime Minister, David Ben-Gurion. The first pledge in that policy based Israel's foreign policy on a principle of loyalty to the United Nations Charter and friendship to all nations, "especially the United States and the Soviet Union."

Midway in his speech, Mr. Sharett addressed an "earnest and urgent" appeal to the Arab states to accept Israel's pledge of peace.

"Israel," he said, "is deeply aware of the common destiny uniting it with them forever. Once our own place and status have been secured we have no higher ambition or more urgent task than to attain a relationship of good neighborliness and friendly collaboration with the people of that vital area."

Mr. Sharett promised then that Israel would do everything possible to settle the differences with its neighbors through the good offices of the United Nations. And as for the future, he said Israel would give its efforts to absorbing the flow of immigrants, to rooting out the "twin evils" of poverty and ignorance and to conducting itself as a progressive, "true democracy."

The General Assembly admitted Israel to membership in the United Nations at 7:28 Wednesday night, May 11, by a vote of 37 to 12, with nine abstentions.

Immediately after the vote Dr. Evatt summoned to the platform Mr. Sharett, who had arrived by plane from Tel Aviv early in the day to hear the final speeches.

"We enter this Assembly, which represents the collective statesmanship of the world, in a spirit of humility, anxious for guidance and enlightenment," said Mr. Sharett.

Mr. Sharett took his seat at the desk that had previously been prepared for the Israeli delegation in the back of the Assembly hall, between the Iraqi and Lebanese delegations. United Nations officials said no additional formalities were required, and that Israel would have the right to participate in all further proceedings of the General Assembly on the same basis as the fifty-eight other members.

The vote came too late to permit the Israeli flag to be raised in the area in front of the main delegates' entrance. A flag pole, however, had been prepared in advance, and the flag was raised with the fifty-eight others a day or so later.

The General Assembly took up the application at its afternoon session and the debate concluded at 7:30 as a result of the fact that the protests of the Arab delegates, although vehement, were much shorter than those they had made during the discussions in the special Political Committee. The necessary two-thirds majority was assured as a result of the 33-to-11 vote in the committee last week in favor of admitting Israel.

The Soviet Union did not speak, but Jan Drohojowski, Polish representative, told the Israeli Government that it could "rely on the assistance of Poland and her friends, the Soviet Republics and the People's Democracies of Europe."

The Jewish people know that a friend in need is a friend, indeed, said Mr. Drohojowski, who said that "when Israel was in statu nascendi we were the fairies who prevailed upon evil witches." He added that British and United States diplomacy were ready to sell out the new state before its birth and that "the State Department's change of mind occurred for reasons of political expediency in the realm of international affairs as well as of electoral strategy."

Warren R. Austin, United States representative, did not mention this attack, but pointed out that the United States was one of the seven countries that introduced the resolution calling for the admission of Israel, and he said that, "My government believes that Israel would be a valuable member of the United Nations and should be admitted to the organization."

MOVING SCENE MARKS

Mr. Austin said that the Assembly was concerned solely with the question of the admission of Israel under the Charter, which states that membership is open to all peace-loving states that accept its obligations and, in the judgment of the organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

However, Mr. Austin emphasized that the United States as a member of the Palestine Conciliation Commission, now negotiating at Lausanne with Israeli and Arab representatives, would "continue to work for peaceful settlement of all outstanding Palestine issues" on the basis of the principle laid down in the General Assembly's December 11 resolution.

This provides that Jerusalem and the surrounding area "should be accorded special and separate treatment from the rest of Palestine and should be placed under effective United Nations control," and that Arab refugees "wishing to return to their homes and live with their neighbors should be permitted to do so at the earliest practicable date."

The Assembly resolution, which was adopted without change as approved last week by the special Political Committee, specifically takes note of statements by Israeli representatives regarding this resolution as well as that recommending partition, according to the New York Times. Mr. Austin said he was certain that, when the General Assembly took up the report of the Conciliation Commission at its September session, it would apply these principles "realistically," that Israel and the Arab states would carry out these resolutions "faithfully according to the present conditions and circumstances and in the light of all developments," and that the General Assembly would apply them "realistically" when it took up the Conciliation Commission's report at its September session.

Britain was silent. The only other great power representative to speak in the debate was Jean Chauvel of France, who announced that France would vote for the admission of Israel, instead of abstaining, in the belief that Israel, while administering the part of Jerusalem it now occupied, would agree to an international regime in the Jerusalem area that would bring about effective United Nations protection and control of the Holy Places.

This was the proposal last week presented to the special Political Committee by Aubrey S. Eban, Israeli representative, who said that Israel had not rejected either the internationalization of Jerusalem or the repatriation of Arab refugees, but that both were questions now being negotiated with the Arab countries through the Conciliation Commission.

Following is the roll-call vote:

For (37)—Argentina, Australia, Bolivia, Byelorussia, Canada, Chile, China, Columbia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, France, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Liberia, Luxemburg, Mexico, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru the Philippines, Poland, the Soviet Union, the Ukraine, Union of South Africa, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela and Yugoslavia.

Against (12) — Afghanistan, Burma, Egypt, Ethiopia, India, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Yemen.

Abstaining (9) — Belgium, Brazil, Denmark, El Salvador, Greece, Siam, Sweden, Turkey and the United Kingdom.

Bolivia announced to the Assembly her acceptance of the Israeli assurances, but El Salvador said she was not satisfied and would abstain.

The admission of Israel to the United Nations is expected to strengthen the hand of its representatives in the Lausanne negotiations, and it is generally supposed that in September the General Assembly will agree to the Israeli proposal regarding Jerusalem and also to the Israeli argument that repatriation of Arab refugees would be dependent upon a general peace settlement between Israel and the Arab countries.

Israel emerged the victor in the fighting that broke out as soon as the British mandate over Palestine ended on May 14, and, aside from the status of Jerusalem, holds almost all of the Negeb, in southern Palestine, and all of Galilee. These areas, under the partition resolution, were to be divided between Israel and the Arab state that was proposed by the resolution but never came into existence.

There is every indication, moreover, that the Arab area of Palestine—either Jerusalem or the Arab refugee central region, will be annexed by King Abdullah of Jordan, whose troops now occupy it, together with the old city of Jerusalem, where most of the holy places are located.

The other Arab States, with the exception of Iraq, are at odds with King Abdullah, and their walk-out was ascribed to their realization that Israel, as a member of the United Nations, is now an indisputable fact and that the peace settlement in all probability will give Israel the territory she now occupies, says the New York Times.

Abdul Majid Abbas of Iraq, the mildest of the Arab speakers, told the assembly that the admission of Israel would be "the highest consummation of injustice," and he urged a ruling by the International Court of Justice on the validity of the Security Council recommendation.

Mahmoud Bey Fawzi of Egypt pointed out that the Israeli Government had not found the assassins of Count Folke Bernadotte, United Nations Mediator for Palestine, and charged that the reputed assassins had been decorated and compensated.

The resolution for the admission of Israel, he said, should state that the applicant had invaded Palestine, desecrated the Holy Places, and endangered the peace of the Middle East. The admission of Israel would be to the "everlasting shame" of the United Nations, human rights, and the peace of the Middle East and the world, he added.

Charles Malik, of Lebanon, who had led the Arab attack, said that the quality of "Western Christian statesmanship" was at stake, and he reiterated that Israel had failed to give assurances regarding either Jerusalem or the Arab refugees. Mr. Malik's resolution to defer action on the application until the Conciliation Commission reports to the September session of the Assembly was rejected by the Political Committee last week, and he did not attempt to revive it.

Zionists To Curb Drives For Israel

Elimination of all of the "unauthorized and illegitimate" fund-raising campaigns, held for and in behalf of Israel will be sought by a committee of members of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, top Zionist body. The committee, headed by Dr. Nachum Goldman, acting chairman of the American section of the Agency, will assure priority of the United Jewish Appeal as central fund-raising agency for Israel in the United States.

At the same time, the Agency noted that the government of Israel has prohibited all officials from indorsing any campaign other than the U. J. A.'s without specific government authorization.

Certain traditional fund-raising operations apart from the U. J. A. will be continued with Agency approval, but the new committee will review the activities of the other approved groups and arrange the timing of collections so that there will be the least possible interference with U. J. A. activities.

Among the other agencies whose fund-raising activities are recognized are the Jewish National Fund; Histadruth, the American supporters of the Israeli labor federation, and Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization.

Members of the committee designated by the Jewish Agency, in addition to Dr. Goldman, are Mrs. Rose Halprin and Baruch Zuckerman, members of the Agency executive; Henry Morgenthau jr., general chairman of U. J. A., and Magistrate Morris Rothenberg, acting chairman of the United Palestine Appeal.

Magistrate Rothenberg, in a separate statement, warned that unless American Jews provided immediate and adequate funds for housing, health and other indispensable needs required by the influx of 25,000 immigrants a month in Israel, "a very dangerous situation" would become more aggravated there. He asserted that the resources of the United Palestine Appeal agencies, charged with aiding Israel's immigration and resettlement program, "are utterly exhausted."

Overhauling the car before starting the summer's driving? Then make sure you have the garage doors open when the motor is running. Remember, carbon monoxide is a stealthy killer. It has no smell, no color and no taste. This gas creeps up without warning in a surprisingly short time. Shiver a bit if you must — but keep those doors open.

look at your home through the eyes of a stranger

Could it do with a good coat of paint and a general 'fix up'?

Strange how we are apt to notice signs of neglect in someone else's house and overlook the same things in our own. It's a costly tendency, too. For one bit of disrepair soon leads to another. Wood deteriorates when the paint wears off. A broken post undermines the whole fence.

It pays to make your repairs promptly.

That goes for indoor improvements, too. You save money, time and material, by attending to home repairs right away — before the damage gets worse. And every improvement adds to your comfort and to your pride in your home.

If you need more money than you have on hand to pay for the necessary repairs, see your B of M manager about a low-cost loan. Save by paying cash. And save yourself trouble by paying off all repair bills at once.

Why not make a list of the repairs your house needs today? Then discuss your improvement plans with your B of M manager . . . in confidence. You'll like his helpful attitude.

WORKING WITH CANADIANS IN EVERY WALK OF LIFE SINCE 1817

No one expects a man to cure his own cancer or a child to treat itself for diphtheria. But many people expect a person suffering from a just as real and often more severe "mental" illness to "snap out of it" unassisted and unguided. Mental illness can, in many cases be prevented, in others cured, but in any case, a mentally ill person needs sympathetic treatment by a competent psychiatrist.

HAIFA, THE PORT OF MIRACLES FOR DP

By David Geller

If you want to see miracles, come down to this Haifa, Mediterranean port which any day — except, perhaps, Saturday — shows Israel opening its gates to the homeless and persecuted from the DP camps and other lands—from Turkey and Afghanistan, from Egypt and Morocco.

The people of Israel have been performing miracles for generations. One year ago they created the greatest miracle. With their courage and blood, they proclaimed the State of Israel. Today, and every day in the week, Israel continues to perform miracles — receiving and welcoming an average of 1,000 impoverished, destitute Jews from many corners of the world. I watched one of these ships at Haifa. The Galilah, flying the Israeli flag, was secured at eight o'clock in tht morning. She was jammed with 1084 passengers, all but 22 of them DP's. The others were Israeli citizens or tourists. Jewish Agency officials expected the arrival of this boat earlier in the day. What they didn't expect on this particular morning was a tramp steamer, the Amasya, bearing 100 immigrants from Turkey.

The Galilah had sailed three days previously from Marseille. Every inch of the ship was crammed with humanity. A group of 80 Hungarian and Roumanian teen-agers, travelling as a unit to a Kibbutz, Givat Chayim, spent every hour of the crossing on the upper deck, enclosed by a huge canvass that was far from wind proof, breathing the cool air of the Mediterranean. They slept on army cots and on the floor. To be sure, not a few were coughing and shivering as they waited to land on Israeli soil, but no one complained. "We're home," the leader of the unit remarked. "We've been through worse. Now we are home — and free."

It was a full hour before the first DP walked down the gangplank and was directed by an official to the DDT station, outside the warehouse. All except tourists and Israeli citizens must have the DDT spray before entering the spacious warehouse where customs officials inspect their belongings. One of the passengers from the Amasya, Daout Abadi, his grizzly beard still covered with the white powder, was carrying a round cylindrical case. It was his only possession. The customs official asked him to open it. And when Abadi conformed, an Israeli policeman walked over and kissed the object inside. It was a Torah.

The first destination of the newcomers is Shaar Aliyah (Gates of Immigration), a 20-minute drive by bus or truck south of Haifa. This sprawling camp, which faces the blue Mediterranean, once served as barracks for the British Army. Today it does double duty for Israel. It was opened on March 13. It was converted to accommodate 1,200. Prior to the arrival of the two ships, 3,200 men, women and children, Moroccans, Turks, Hungarians, and those from the DP camp were taxing the facilities of the camp. Now, it was forced to make room for another 1,162!

"We'll manage," calmly remarked Shlomo Neumann, 50, a Haganah veteran since 1936 who was discharged from the Israeli Army on January 16 and now serves as the Jewish Agency's director of the camp. "Yes, it's not always pleasant to see the overcrowding—but what can we do? We cannot ship them off from here until we get word that we have some sort of housing for them. Yes, that's our big problem now," he sighed.

There was a time — in the early life of this camp — when newcomers would stay only three days, Neumann related. But now they are kept longer, and that's what worries him — and thousands of other warm-hearted Israelis — and, of course, the DP's. How long will they remain in these smelly tents and huts? That's the number one question preying on the minds of all.

A new arrival is on his own when he gets off the truck or out of the bus that transported him from the pier to the "Gates of Immigration". A worker in headquarters building — a small cabin on a slope — issues instructions over a loud speaker. He talks in Yiddish, in German, in French, in Hebrew, and other tongues until he is sure that everyone coming in understands him.

There's a babble of voices. But soon it dies down and people begin lining up. The first window is for the registration of all new arrivals. As soon as an immigrant has registered, he moves along — and fast — to the next window to pick up two blankets, a freshly laundered sheet, spoons, cups, plates, and other cutlery. Everything received at this window is recorded on the card, and anyone wanting more blankets or extra utensils gets it. And the majority come back for more blankets after the first night because even if you sleep in a barrack the dampness makes you uncomfortable.

Now the new citizen of Israel is ready to go to his quarters. Quarters are where you find a free cot, in a tent, in a hut or in the barracks. There is no policeman, no armed guard, no one with a club or with a gun. But men — all of them veterans, most of them disabled— are stationed conveniently to give guidance and direction.

You see a man of 45 walking towards the huts. He is loaded down with his "household" equipment — blankets, sheets. You notice his limp and offer help.

"I don't need any help now, thank you. I am no longer in Galuth. I come here to build — to help build our land. I got my strength back when I got off the ship in Haifa. Thank you."

Food in camp is served in an old brick mess hall. It is not too brightly illuminated but it is clean. And the food is prepared in a spotlessly clean kitchen. No one serves it. It's ladelled out. You come and get it unless you are physically disabled. The food is tasty. A typical lunch menu is two thick slices of baloney, a vegetable, potato salad, compote, plenty of bread, and fresh oranges.

The first morning at camp is devoted to medical examinations. The results of these physicals are recorded on the first registration card. A woman physician who specializes in diseases of the skin, reported that she had examined "over 10,000" within a three-week period. Everyone must have a TB X-ray, taken in a mobile unit. And everyone must register in the Kupath Cholim (sick fund) for which the Jewish Agency pays for three months. After that, the individual pays his own fees.

Children up to two are separated from their parents and cared for in a separate building when the physician recommends this. This building has its own kitchen and special sleeping quarters. It is the cleanest in the camp. There is also a small isolation ward and a special

Peddled Coal, Rose In Fabulous Career

Samuel Rubel, president of the Rubel Corporation, coal and ice, New York, and of the Ebling Brewery, the Bronx, died at Ridgefield, Conn., in his home, Sunset Hall. His age was 66. He was stricken with cerebral thrombosis in his office in Manhattan.

The career of Samuel Rubel verged on the fabulous. Born in Riga, Latvia, he came to the United States at the age of 21 and began as a peddler of ice and coal in Brooklyn. His first route was the north side of Watkins Street, in the East New York section. He covered it with a horse and wagon. A competitor covered the south side of the street. Up the tenement stoops Mr. Rubel personally carried his cakes of ice and bags of coal.

His next move was to a coal platform, with an office, on Pitkin Avenue. "That year I started selling to other peddlers," he said later. So the business grew until he was able to afford the shipping of coal by rail.

He coined the catch phrase, "One good ton deserves another." In 1925 he bought the majority stock of the Ice Service Corporation and also bought out two other firms. Asked the value of all his properties at that time, he estimated them at $30,000,000.

Two years later his firm was merged with the Commonwealth Fuel Company and the Putnam Coal and Ice Company. The new concern, the Rubel Corporation, of which he became head, then had thirty-five coal pockets, forty ice factories and fifty coal and ice stations in the greater city.

The same year Mr. Rubel bought the Ebling Brewery, then in trouble with prohibition authorities for the manufacture and sale of beer. He planned to convert it into an ice-cream factory.

Mr. Rubel was active in charitable endeavors, particularly in behalf of orphan children. In 1933 he entertained more than 10,000 orphans at his expense at Coney Island, as part of the celebration of the sixty-fifth anniversary of the Ebling Brewery.

In 1947 Mr. Rubel, as a brewer, offered to return voluntarily to grain rationing, in order to conserve grain for the feeding of the European needy. Addressing Charles Luckman, chairman of the President's Food Committee, in Washington, he said, "When it's a question of beer or bread, our vote is for bread every time."

Three years ago his thirty-two-room colonial-type residence at Roslyn, L.I., which had been one of the landmarks of the area, was destroyed by fire. Besides the loss in real property, the loss in jewellery sustained by Mrs. Rubel in the fire was first estimated to have amounted to about $500,000. Later some of the burned jewellery was recovered.

Mr. Rubel was also head of the Mountain Ice and Fuel Corporation of New Jersey.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Dora Nachmowitz Rubel, he leaves two daughters, Mrs. Bernice Ross and Mrs. Honora Shapiro, both of Roslyn.

Former Partner Of Truman Saw Israel In Style

In the promised land of Israel, the sky is glassy blue at this time of year, and the fragrance of orange blossoms fills the air. Bronzed men, their arms and legs bare, toil in the warm sun. In the still air, the laughter of children comes faint but clear from the playground shade of palm trees.

To Eddie Jacobson this is the modern miracle of Israel, the homeland won from the desert, the long-sought haven for the Jewish people.

He and his wife, who returned to Kansas City, Missouri, from a two-week visit to the newest of the nations, hold the hope that Israel some day, before too long, will relight the whole Middle East. He believes the depleted and impoverished neighboring nations can be made to bloom again; that decayed seaports will be restored to commerce, and that agricultural, industrial and educational advancements will revive all of Asia Minor.

Something of all this Eddie Jacobson expects to relate some day to his good friend and former business partner, President Harry S. Truman. It will be an entirely informal and unofficial report—just a friend's account of a journey and the things that impressed him.

While the Jacobsons travelled as ordinary citizens, there were aspects of red-carpet treatment. Very few tourists have a reception at the American Embassy in Paris and spend a fortnight's visit at the home of the Ambassador in Israel.

The Jacobsons' first sightseeing was in the clean new city of Tel Aviv, a metropolis of about 260,000 persons.

"It is the most American city I ever saw outside of America," Eddie Jacobson recalls. "It made me think of the boom towns I used to see down in Oklahoma when I was a travelling salesman before I opened my own store.

"Building is going on everywhere. There are new apartment houses, California style, all white [illegible] made out of terra cotta. The traffic is heavy on the streets, and there are all kinds of vehicles moving, from fine American cars to little carts.

"The shops, the movie houses, the restaurants are bright and modern. But most of all you notice the people. They are happy. They have work to do. They are going places."

Ex-Sergeant Eddie Jacobson's last trip abroad was after he had trained with Lieut. Harry S. Truman in Battery F of the 129th Field Artillery when both had gone to France. This time he was impressed by the future leaders of the young nation, the children who have good educational, medical and recreational facilities.

"It is a wonderful thing," Mr. Jacobson says, "to see children who are only 10 or 12 years old and fluent in two or three languages. They are instructed in the Hebrew language until the fifth grade. Then they begin English, and a little later French."

Eggs and butterfat, the only two food items rationed in Israel, are issued to children in larger amounts than for adults.

From Tel Aviv, the Jacobsons journeyed to the seaport city of Haifa. There they saw refugee ships bringing new citizens to the nation at the rate of 30,000 a month.

The theory behind Israel's open door policy of immigration was explained to the Jacobsons later on their visit to Rehovoth, the home of President and Mrs. Chaim Weizmann. The 74-year-old English scientist, whose pace has slackened but whose mind and personality remain keen as ever, told the visitors that the new farming and manufacturing developments would easily absorb the homeseekers arriving in Israel.

With machinery and irrigation, Dr. Weizmann said with assurance, the Negev desert section in the south of Israel could be made to support 2,000,000 persons. In the Red Sea is a boundless source of potash for fertilizer which, at present, is one of the largest export products of Israel, says the New York Times. Given time and workers, the Negev could be made comparable to the region to the north where, in eleven years, orange and lemon trees and other fruits and crops are growing profitably.

Chemists are working on such projects as the production of yarn and plastics from the castor bean. Of the yarn produced, they are highly optimistic, predicting that the development may revolutionize the textile industry.

The tour of the two visitors took them on to Jerusalem, where they visited ancient shrines, examined olive trees 2,000 years old and inspected battle damage. They also visited along the Lebanon border, chatted with friendly Bedouin Arab tribes and met a hospitable chief.

Back in Tel Aviv, they prepared for the trip home. They did a little shopping, finding prices very high. Luncheon, for instance, cost the equivalent of $2.50, and an American-made car might bring $6,000 or $8,000.

"Maintaining a large army and carrying out an extensive building program," says Mr. Jacobson, "has been a great drain on the national economy of Israel. The crying need still is housing and more housing, and that requires money.

"When that nation can have peace and can enjoy a peacetime economy, Israel will need little help from the outside world. In five years, probably, Israel could be on its feet.

"Today, Jewish farmers are plowing with tractors, and the Arabs who have been tilling the soil with donkeys and wooden plows are turning to the new methods. The great hope of Israel is to show the scientific way to the neighboring states, to make Israel a shining spot in the world, to make Israel a bulwark against Communism."

Mrs. Weizmann Praises Spirit Of Israeli Women

Mrs. Chaim Weizmann, wife of the President of Israel, said there was a possibility that "very soon not a single Jew will be allowed to leave Eastern European countries." Therefore, she said, immigration into Israel must go on at top speed. "We have lost 6,000,000 Jews; we can't afford to lose any more," she added.

Mrs. Weizmann spoke at a luncheon of the women's division of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. The speech was her only public address in the United States. She left for Israel with her husband, ending a three-week stay.

Two hundred women leaders in the drive announced gifts of $100,000 at the luncheon, raising the women's division total to $2,100,000 in a nation-wide goal of $250,000,000. Many of the gifts were in honour of Mrs. Weizmann and the first anniversary of Israel's independence.

"My husband and I would have loved to be home for this celebration," Mrs. Weizmann said, "but if we could not be in Israel, there is no better place for us than here with the workers for UJA. How Israel will celebrate Independence Day in the years to come depends critically on the generosity of American Jewry at this very moment."

Because of the miraculous successes achieved in Israel, she said, speakers are inclined to emphasize the positive aspect of conditions there. Difficult problems abound, she declared and some of the new immigrants, not so spirited as the early pioneers, find the long months in reception camps dispiriting. A far reaching construction program must be carried out and in addition, nothing has yet been done about rehabilitating wounded fighting men, she said.

"We can save the Government of Israel millions of dollars if we start this rehabilitation immediately," she declared. "If we wait, the morale of these veterans will go down. They will develop the mentality of the unemployed and will undermine the morale of their neighbors."

Mrs. Weizmann also discussed "the sore and tragic problem of the Arabs." They had been urged to stay in Israel, she explained, to work and live on equal terms with the Jews. "But the political motives of others, balance of power politics and political machinations forced many to leave the country," she said. "Some 400,000 left — not 800,000, an untrue and misleading figure constantly quoted."

No one can sympathize more with refugees than the Jews, Mrs. Weizmann said. When Israel becomes a member of the United Nations, she declared, she will insist on discussion and action on the problem, according to the New York Times.

In her brief remarks on the possibility of restricted emigration from Eastern European lands, Mrs. Weizmann said: "War is in the air and Jews are needed in time of war." She agreed it was more a matter of war nerves than probable hostilities.

Mrs. Weizmann said Israeli women are working alongside their men in the armed forces and in the fields, and explained that they do it because the four walls of a home are especially precious to women. She spoke at a luncheon given by the Women's Division of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

After describing the problems which the new state faced during the first year of its existence, Mrs. Weizmann dwelt on the great contributions of the women of Israel during that period, says the New York Herald Tribune.

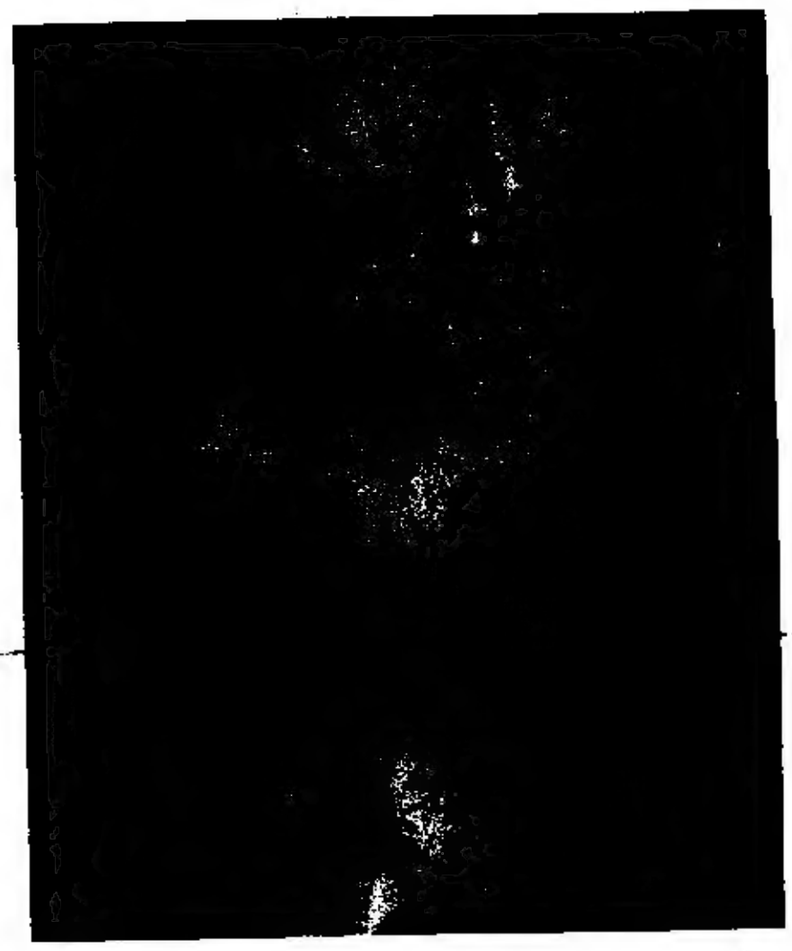
"In a way, I cannot say that the women did anything different from the men," she said. "In the very beginning the women showed that they were ready to work as equals, to fight as equals and even to die as equals—so that men and women in Israel might truly be equals. An Israeli woman did not think it was braver to help build a settlement in the desert, simply because she was a woman. Nor did the thousands of girls — almost children, really — who fought side by side with their brothers against the enemy, feel that their mission was unique. And when the women died, as quite a few did, our tears were the same bitter tears we wept for all the children of Israel who fell. And there isn't a home in Israel where the anniversary celebration is not mixed with thoughts of some one dear who never returned from the battlefield.

"Yet there was something about the way our women struggled. For working and fighting has special meaning to women when they know that they are working and fighting for a home. And they knew that Israel, the homeland, was their only chance for a home. Thus, every house that is built in Israel seems something of a personal triumph in every woman's mind, because, I suppose, four walls are especially precious to women. Our homes in Israel are very modest compared to American standards, but they do have kitchens and closets and doors you can lock at night. Women who had almost thought they forgot about those things in the seeming endlessness of concentration camp and D. P. life, became revitalized somehow at the prospect of a real home once again."

UJA-A SACRED DUTY

A Statement by Dr. Chaim Weizmann

PRESIDENT OF ISRAEL



FOR MANY YEARS, American Jews have played a prominent part in laying the foundations of the new life that is springing up in our ancient land—Israel. On the basis of what has been created in the past by the United Jewish Appeal, we have now obtained the status of national independence. We are now about to enter a new phase.

Our state is different from that of other peoples. A normal state has only need to provide for the security and welfare of those who actually live within its boundaries. We not only have to build up our country, but in addition we have to provide homes for all who want to come and make their home in Israel.

Every day, men, women and children are streaming in large numbers through the gates of Zion. They show signs of what they have gone through in the torture chambers of Hitler's Europe, but there is a hope in their eyes. They come to Israel not merely to find a resting place for their weary feet; they want to find that measure of human happiness, the chance of a free life which is God's gift afforded to every man and woman on God's earth.

It is our sacred duty to satisfy their deep desire.

Where are we to put all these people when they come in? Our financial resources have been strained to the utmost by the war of defense which was forced upon us. It has never been written before in history that a people was called upon to make an effort of such tremendous complexity under conditions like these. We can stand up to our great task only if Jews throughout the world give us the maximum of their support.

As it must be evident to anyone, this is a burden which we cannot carry alone. We in Israel have to look after our own needs and to pay for our own defense and this in itself is a great test for our population. The task in which we need the help of the Jewish people is the job of putting new hope in those who are now coming through the gates of Israel.

Among the four freedoms, as the late President Roosevelt proclaimed at a critical stage of the last war, there are two which have a special meaning for our people:—Freedom from fear and freedom from want. We can assure to the newcomers the freedom from fear. We can assure that they will be safe and secure in our midst, once the Jews of the United States will help to insure to them freedom from want. We must have very substantial financial aid in the task of bringing new hope, of building new homes, of meeting the basic physical and spiritual needs of the new arrivals who come into Israel.

We are being given a unique chance which we must not miss and we can only make good if you are with us. The people of Israel have given us their blood and treasure to secure that staus of independence, that measure of security which enables us to bring hundreds of thousands of Jews into our country. It is for the Jews of America to help build on the foundations which have been laid the structure of the new society in which every Jew who wants to come here can find his rightful place.

The 1949 United Jewish Appeal campaign marks the beginning of a new chapter in the upbuilding of Jewish Palestine. I know that in this great hour, American Jews will do their utmost to crown this undertaking with success.

U.S. AND CANADA HELP JEWS OUT OF SHANGHAI

The United States and Canada are helping to speed up the evacuation of 1,800 Jewish refugees still stranded in Shanghai, China, the World Jewish Congress announced. Following appeals by the WJC and other Jewish organizations, the United States is expediting the issuance of visas to qualified emigrants, and Canada has agreed to admit more than 250 in the near future.

WJC representatives in Australia are urging the Australian Government to temporarily accept several hundred Jews from Shanghai, pending their permanent admission elsewhere, because of unsettled conditions in the Shanghai area. Since October 1948, about 6,000 Jewish refugees have left Shanghai, most of them for Israel or the United States, and 1,800 European refugees who remain have been waiting since 1945 for U.S. visas in order to join relatives. During World War II, Shanghai was a temporary haven of refuge for [illegible] 20,000 Jews who escaped from Europe but could not emigrate elsewhere.

Only 18,500 Jews remain in Bulgaria, out of 48,500 living there in 1947. Since 1947, approximately 30,000 Jews have left Bulgaria to emigrate to Palestine. In the eight-month period from May to December, 1948, 15,081 Bulgarian Jews emigrated to the new Jewish State. During the first three months of 1949, an additional 15,000 are estimated to have departed for Israel, although final figures for this period are not yet available.

Until a few years ago the likes and dislikes of a child were considered secondary in his feeding schedule. The mother crammed the foods that were "good for him" down his throat without heeding his protests. Child experts now realize that parents should adopt a more subtle attitude. They should recognize some of the child's preferences and try to substitute more attractive foods with the same food values.

Seek Public Hearing In College Bias Case

Counsel for the American Jewish Congress and other petitioners urged the New York State commissioner of education, Francis T. Spaulding, to "satisfy public conscience" by ordering the New York City Board of Higher Education to conduct a public hearing into charges of anti-Semitism against Prof. William E. Knickerbocker, chairman of the department of Romance languages at the City College of New York.

The petition was opposed by Michael A. Castaldi, chief of the Division of Education, New York City Corporation Counsel's Office, who said nothing was developed at the hearing which had not been considered by the Board when it dismissed similar charges last September. He waived the question of Dr. Spaulding's jurisdiction, saying that the Board was interested in obtaining from the commissioner a decision "on the merits."

Bertram Diamond, who represented tht American Jewish Congress, the Student Council of the City College, main center day session, and two professors at C.C.N.Y., Dr. Pedro Bach-y-Rita and Elliott H. Polinger, requested an order directing the Board to hold a public hearing on the charges against Professor Knickerbocker and on the question of whether the two professors were removed from the 1946 promotion list because they had joined in filing charges against the Romance languages department head.

Mr. Diamond, who argued for almost two hours before Commissioner Spaulding, said "a permanent end to the disquiet caused by conflicting opinions can come only after a hearing on the evidence."

"An open public hearing," he added, "is the only course consistent with sound principles of education; that, and that alone, will satisfy the public conscience."

Dr. Spaulding reserved decision on the petition. No mention was made during the hearing of the recent strike by City College students in connection with the case.

Mr. Castaldi said that charges against the professor were investigated thoroughly by a committee of the faculty, which found them to be unsubstantiated; that the general faculty concurred; that the faculty findings were upheld by a committee of the Board of Education and, finally by the unanimous board, reports the New York Times.

Mr. Diamond cited the findings of the City Council last June that Professor Knickerbocker has been guilty of "reprehensible conduct."

"Anyone who says the report of the City Council is a political document," he said, "is not speaking the truth. I'll take that 'political document' any day in preference to the 'political document' the board wrote in 1946. The board never evaluated the anti-Semitic utterances in relation to Professor Knickerbocker's conduct."

When Mr. Diamond finished his argument Dr. Spaulding commented:

"I shall discount all references to 'political documents.' For my part I will throw that right out."

Mr. Diamond maintained that the Board of Higher Education had arrived at its decision after private conferences and after employing "devious methods."

"Can it be said that as long as a fellow keeps his administrative books right, you can't do anything —that what he says doesn't matter?" he asked. "That's bound to be wrong, and it has been held to be wrong in cases decided right here in the Education Department.

"Knickerbocker has committed acts which constitute unbecoming conduct. Despite the presence of admitted improprieties, he never has drawn as much as a flick on tht wrist. In the fact of conflicting findings by two responsible bodies, public interest requires a full and fair public hearing."

Asserting that "at least a prima facie case has been established," the AJC attorney added:

"The best way to decide such a matter is to have live witnesses and to insure a thoroughgoing formal public hearing."

Mr. Diamond held that the issue boiled down to the question:

"Did Professor Knickerbocker engage in misconduct by reason of anti-Semitic utterances?"

"The board," he added, "never evaluated anti-Semitic utterances in relation to Professor Knickerbocker's conduct."

Cites Israeli Need Of Teachers

Dr. Eliezer Rieger, head of the Department of Education at the Hebrew University on Mount Scopus in Jerusalem, told a round-table conference of American educators in New York that Israel needed 1,500 to 2,000 new teachers annually.

This, he said, was three or four times the number formerly required and was made necessary by the influx into the new state of 200,000 immigrants yearly, including 30,000 children of school age.

At an all-day conference sponsored by the National Council of Jewish Women, of which Mrs. Joseph M. Welt, of Detroit, Mich., is national president, Dr. Rieger listened to ideas that he said he would take back with him for guidance in "the great pioneering enterprise" of education in Israel.

Under the direction of Dr. Paul Klapper, president emeritus of Queen's College, fifty educators exchanged ideas at the conference, which was planned by the council's advisory committee, organized by Dr. Sidney Hook, chairman of the Department of Philosophy, New York University.

Dr. Klapper said that "the strength of Israel will be derived from the vitality of her educational system and the professional integrity of her teachers." He emphasized the role of education in making the new State socially progressive.

Fourteen participants discussed such subjects as educational ties between Israel and Jews throughout the world, selection of teachers and methods of screening, problems of personnel, cultural absorption of newcomers into Israel, and universal, free and compulsory education.

Dr. Rieger said he joined the view of Dr. Chaim Weizmann, Israel's president, in deploring the present trifurcate system of education on social levels.

All live with little privacy. The "home" they longed for in the DP camps isn't here — yet. It's all a matter of funds. Lack of funds not only is retarding the sorely needed building program but is holding up the repair of abandoned villages.

With the return of summer, Canada's highways will once again be choked with thousands of motorists. Don't be responsible for needless injury by careless driving. Scientific tests have shown that rash, heedless driving actually saves little time while endangering lives. Don't learn about traffic laws the hard way. And remember, alcohol and gasoline don't mix!

U.S. STUDENTS TO VISIT ISRAEL

To strengthen cultural and educational bonds between the United States and Israel, a new program will be established at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem in July for 120 American students. Sponsored by the university and the Jewish Agency Youth Department, the summer institute will offer an eight-week course on problems of the new state and its relationship with the Arabs and the world.

Designed for Americans, the classes will be conducted in English by members of the Hebrew University faculty. It will be the first time that Hebrew has not been the language of instruction at the university.

Rabbi Herbert Weiner, co-ordinator of the project, has described the summer institute as "a compact and unique laboratory for the study of economics, sociology and politics." For three weeks the students will participate in seminars.

Then the students will observe at first hand the problems facing the new democracy. For a second three weeks they will live in various types of settlements and see Jewish and Arabs communities in action.

Because the Hebrew University campus of Mount Scopus is in Arab territory, the classes for Israeli students as well as for the Americans at the summer institute will be held at Terra Sancta College in Jerusalem. This Roman Catholic school, directed by French and American priests, has been lent to the university.

The final period of the institute will include a week's tour of Israel and a week of interviews with government leaders, who will explain the structure of the new state.

Arrangements for the session are being made by World Study-tours of Columbia University and Travel and Study, Inc. The cost, covering tuition and all expenses, is expected not to exceed $1,050. Application must be sent before May 10 to Rabbi Weiner of the Jewish Agency Youth Department, 16 East Sixty-sixth Street.

The institute, the first Israeli experiment in international education, will be specifically for American students this summer, but its directors feel that future summer institutes will include students from all over the world.

HUNGRY FOR IRON, the world's steel industry looks to Ungava as the immense new source to supply its increasing needs. There, in the wilderness of rocks and stunted trees stretching north to Ungava Bay, lies one of the richest, purest deposits of iron ore the world has ever known.

The vast area is now being actively explored. Already over 300 million tons of ore have been outlined; camps have arisen; airfields and roads have been built, and the route is being surveyed for a 350-mile railway from the St. Lawrence at Seven Islands. In another section, inland from Havre St. Pierre, what promises to be the world's richest source of titanium has been discovered and is being developed. Our one-time wasteland proves to be a treasure-house.

This new northern expansion is but one of many examples of Canada's tremendous modern development. Never before, here or elsewhere, have there been such opportunities as those which await the energy and initiative of young Canadians in our own country today.

"NEW OPPORTUNITIES..."

"Never before have there been so many new fields and opportunities for young Canadian men and women who, through hard work and persistence, will be able to achieve success and prosperity in the years to come. The continuing development of our industries will be due in large measure to the true spirit of progressiveness of the young Canadian of today", says LUCIEN BOUGIE of Montreal.

From bank clerk to president and owner of the largest baby shoe company in Canada, selling La Parisette shoes through offices and showrooms around the world, Mr. Bougie's career is an example to all ambitious men. His training in banking and accounting has enabled him, through conservative methods of finance, to keep his finger on the pulse of his business, thus avoiding the pitfalls and difficulties attendant upon the establishment and growth of any business venture.

Built N. Y. Skyscrapers

Abe Adelson, real estate developer of Kansas City, Missouri, and Beverly Hills, died of a heart attack at the age of 54. He was stricken at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel where he was staying with Mrs. Adelson on one of his twice-a-year visits.

Born in New York, Mr. Adelson was known only as a milliner until 1924, when he began his real estate operations with the erection of a large structure on Seventh Avenue in the textile district, which he followed with a second at Sixth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street. His third was the large skyscraper at 2 Park Avenue, in which his own real estate offices were located for a long period. Then came the Film Centre Building on Ninth Avenue, between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets, opened in January, 1929.

One of his most important buildings, known by sight to nearly every visitor to New York, was the Squibb Building, on the Southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street. Mr. Adelson, as owner and builder, acted as host at the opening ceremonies on May 1, 1930.

During the last five years Mr. Adelson had made his home in North Kansas City, Mo., a section of Kansas City that had lapsed into a more or less stagnant condition. He developed the district into a thriving part of the community. Recently he had been making plans for property in Los Angeles he had purchased from the Cord interests. He was president of the Beverly Hills Realty Company.

Mr. Adelson leaves his wife, Florence; two daughters, Mrs. Rita Edelman of Beverly Hills, wife of Lou Edelman, a Warner Brothers producer; and Mrs. Sidney Golding, of New York; also a brother, Milton Adelson, and three sisters, Mrs. Alan Lloyd and Mrs. Harry Berger, all of New York and Mrs. Louis Pokress, of Miami, Florida.

A troublesome fungous infection of the feet that makes itself known by itching, swelling, redness, cracks in the skin and small blisters, is a serious problem in many sports and industries. Known as "athlete's foot", the disease may often be controlled by regular disinfection of floors, provision of special footwear for use in shower rooms, and the use of foot bath disinfectants or foot-powders.

"CANADA UNLIMITED"

In early Canada, the flickering fire from the hearth gave the habitant his only light.

Lamps burning animal and fish oil gradually came into use during the 17th century. In 1759, by order of the Governor, citizens had to carry lamps when they went out at night.

Gas was hailed as a great advancement when it was first used for lighting in 1841 in Toronto. 36 years later, Montreal harbour-front saw the first electric lights—and a new era was born. Today, even in remote country places, homes and buildings are efficiently illuminated by electricity.

Now the uses of light are many, from decoration to display, and each new use opens up many more. In the application of lighting to our life there is a shining future, with great opportunity for Canadians. Yes—there's room to grow in Canada Unlimited.

Just how much room is held in "Canada Unlimited", an illustrated 144 page book published by the O'Keefe Foundation. You may obtain your copy by sending 25c in cash (no stamps or cheques, please) to "Canada Unlimited", Dept. N3-9, O'Keefe House, Toronto, Ontario. Please print your name and address clearly. All monies received will be donated to the Canadian Citizenship Council.

ISRAELI BATTLE

binding the state to Sabbath observance, he did not propose that the Government should prosecute citizens who violate the Sabbath by smoking cigarettes or driving their cars. But he maintained that Government-licensed buses and Government-owned railways should be idle, and that Government customs and immigration officials should observe a day of rest on the Sabbath.

In the matter of dietary laws, too, Rabbi Fishman said he did not propose that the Government should have power to raid private kitchens and examine housewives' pots to see if they complied with rabbinical law. Nor did he propose to ban the import of pork and other non-kosher foods. But he maintained that the State Treasury should not allocate hard currency for the import of non-kosher food, and that Government-run prisons, hospitals and other institutions, including the army, should have kosher kitchens.

REPORT SHOWS

figures also showed that the great bulk of immigrant children were in foster homes.

Indications that local community needs are receiving increasingly greater attention were reported to the CJFWF. The long delayed need for new construction of buildings and other facilities was met in small part when communities projected $170,000,000 in capital funds campaigns. Although construction of many buildings was actually begun, substantial increases in facilities were not recorded by the end of 1948. Despite plans for expansion of the number of homes for aged, the CJFWF report indicated an increase of only two per cent in the total beds available for aged in 1948. However, many communities reported active planning for filling the needs of the ever growing numbers of Jewish aged, and the elimination of long waiting lists for admission to homes.

Hospital statistics recorded little change in volume of service in 1948. While some increases were reported by hospitals for chronically ill, tuberculosis hospitals experienced a slight decrease in volume of service. General hospitals reported that about one-half of patients admitted were Jewish, a slight decrease from the previous year.

DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL DEFENCE

AN OPEN LETTER
TO ALL EMPLOYERS
About NATIONAL DEFENCE

OFFICE OF THE MINISTER
OTTAWA

Dear Sir:

You are undoubtedly aware of the importance of national defence today. Essential to the development of that defence are the men of the RESERVE UNITS. The service and wartime experience of the veteran and the alert intelligence of the younger element are vital to the development of plans for national security.

All three services have been actively appealing for men and the response has been good. However, many men who wish to join are in doubt on an important point which only you, as their employer, can answer.

They would be giving part of their time to Canada. Would you on your side release them for the required annual training period? This training is an essential part of their voluntary service. You can help them to serve Canada by granting them additional leave with or without pay.

The decision is yours. Your help is needed in building a sound defence organization to help insure the peace of Canada.

Sincerely,

Minister of National Defence

Silence

The author of Biblical Proverbs admonishes that "there is a time to keep silent." What splendid advice! While speech is one of the glories of humans, yet it is equally important to be accomplished in the art of silence. In music, silence is as necessary as sound. Nature, too, has its silence, the silence of the night. What are the benefits of silence?

In the first place, silence is needed for its curative powers. Those who have regularly fled far "from the madding crowd" will attest to the value of silence in the maintenance of physical and mental health. Those who know not the regular practice of silence soon break under the push, rush, and feverish excitement of complex present-day living. The absence of silence in our lives is a contributing factor to the astonishing increase of mental diseases and what is termed heart failure.

Silence makes possible moral and spiritual growth. For the best way to advance is to stop sometimes and see where the road is leading. An artist stops and backs away from his canvas now and then to get a truer impression of what he has been doing. So men and women must pause to obtain what the sages termed, "Cheshon Ha-nefesh", an accounting of soul to improve individual living and thinking. That is why meditation has ever played such an important part in all religions. Quietism and silent meditation to this day form an integral part in worship. And the purposes of worship or "worthship" itself is to give us the opportunity to ask the question, whither are we tending? Silence is the soil out of which character grows.

Often what a wonderful indication of moral strength it is to be able to answer false accusations and slander by mere silence! The Jew of a bygone day practiced for the most part dignified silence in the face of all sorts of false charges. He answered anti-Semitism best not by apologizing for his Judaism but by living and practicing the faith of his fathers. What a pity that modern Jews indulge so much in telling the non-Jewish world about Yiddishkeit and fail for the most part to live the faith. Sometimes silence heals wounds best, not speech! Innocence does not need to explain everything.

To obtain visions and inspirations we must indulge in solitude. That is why prophets, seers, and scientists have so often withdrawn from society and sought out the quiet of the mountain top and the stillness of laboratory and cave. To obtain mastery of a subject one must observe seasons of meditation. Constant association with the crowd makes for shallowness. To be creative one must learn to keep company with himself, for every great invention and noble thought has its roots in silence.

We need silence in order to keep alive within us the sense of wonder. What a pity that due to our mechnical living so many of us have permitted our sense of wonder to dull and even to die! For so many life has become a perfunctory schedule. We go through the daily routine of existence while the wonders of the world never arouse our spiritual appreciation. Wonder grows in stillness. In the presence of a master-musician who produces matchless harmony by touching strings, speech is sacrilege. The soul hushes in the presence of such a one.

We today live in an increasingly noisy world. The rattle of machinery, the shoutings of the crowd are ever with us. We need at times to escape from the outwardness of life. We need silence to give us the inner peace and calm. A full, rounded life must seek silence as well as society. We need both for wholesome living and striving. The great Carlyle, in rhapsodical manner, has beautifully expressed his appreciation of silence in the following words: "Speech is of Time, Silence is of Eternity. Bees will not work except in silence. The great silent men! A country which has none or few of these is in a bad way. Like a forest that has no roots, which had all turned into leaves and boughs which must soon wither and be no forest."

Assayed Hassan Ibrahim of Yemen pointed out, however, that there were twenty votes in committee for the Lebanese proposal. He said that "power politics" were responsible for the "arbitrary approach" of the United Nations to the Palestine problem.

In words which were interpreted by other delegates as a criticism of Dr. Evatt and of Secretary General Trygve Lie, he said that United Nations officials "and their Zionist cohorts" had not been impartial but were responsible for the "twisted procedure" the Assembly was following.

Mr. Ibrahim also attacked an unnamed great power for having aided "this artificial state" while professing friendship with the Arab states, but he refused to say afterwards whether he was referring to the United States. Despite various reversals in its Palestine policy over the past two years, some of the Arab delegates consider the United States primarily responsible for the Israeli success that was formally confirmed.

The Soviet Union was chosen by lot to cast the first vote, and voted for Israel on the roll-call vote.

The delegations of the six Arab states — Egypt, Iraq, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Yemen — walked out of the Assembly Hall at Flushing Meadow in protest before the applause over the election of Israel as the fifty-ninth member of the United Nations had died away. They indignantly refused to make any statement to correspondents regarding their intentions, but drove away to New York.

The Arab delegates, who also walked out when the General Assembly adopted the resolution recommending the partition of Palestine on November 29, 1947, gave no hint of their impending action in their speeches in the General Assembly.

They protested bitterly, however, that Israel had refused to comply with the provisions of a General Assembly resolution adopted on December 11, 1948, calling for an international regime in Jerusalem and the repatriation of Arab refugees. Also, they challenged the validity of a Security Council recommendation for the admission of Israel, since Britain, a permanent member of the Council, had abstained.

The Charter requires the concurring votes of the Big Five on all except procedural questions, and the Arab delegates insisted that the Assembly should first get a ruling from the International Court of Justice. This procedure was contained in a resolution presented by Iraq, but Dr. Evatt ruled it out of order on the ground that the General Assembly could not examine the decision of another United Nations body.

"It symbolizes another achievement in our century-long struggle, and a membership in the family of nations," said Eliahu Elath, Israeli Ambassador to the United States, as he told a gathering in Constitution Hall, in Washington, of the vote in the United Nations Assembly.

The meeting, sponsored by the Jewish Community Council in celebration of the first anniversary of the birth of Israel, also heard Vice President Alben W. Barkley and Jacob Blaustein, president of the American Jewish Committee, who recently returned from a trip to Israel.

Mr. Elath said that the parallel in the birth of the two countries had "undoubtedly fired the enthusiasms of Americans of all faiths," for the United States is traditionally the champion of "liberty and freedom everywhere."

The Ambassador asserted that historians would recognize May 14, 1948, as the day of the birth of the Jewish State.

The British mandate ended on that day, and "the invasion of Palestine by Arab forces from the outside began," Mr. Elath said.

"Our war for independence and liberty in Israel has been a costly war, with the sacrifice of our best boys and girls," Mr. Elath went on, "yet the armistice agreements with the Arab states represent an important landmark in the relations of Israel with the United Nations and the Arab world."

"In our planning, in our problems, and in our struggles, we have constantly felt that we have had the warm and full-hearted support of the Government and the people of the United States," Mr. Elath declared. He paid tribute to President Truman because of his faith in the early fight of Israel for recognition.

The Israeli national colors were raised at Lake Success, N.Y., in the presence of Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett and 500 Secretariat employes and visitors, who joined in singing the Zionists' anthem, "Hatikvah." Tears of joy streamed down the cheeks of several onlookers. Flags of the fifty-nine members of the United Nations, like their seats at Assembly meetings, are arranged in alphabetical order, and the Israeli flag was hoisted between those of Iraq and Lebanon.

Holding the blue and white flag before it was hoisted on the tall staff, Mr. Sharett said that he could "only pray that we may prove worthy of the dignity this restores to us, that we may prove equal to the responsibilities which this new status imposes on us."

After the flag had been raised, Mr. Sharett said:

"This Star of David, which has been carried with us in the thousands of years of our exile, dispersion and martyrdom; this Star of David, which has been used by our oppressors as a badge of shame; this Star of David, which has been our lodestar in all our wanderings; this white and blue flag, which we have carried with us in our trials and tribulations in the Land of Israel, which accompanied our pioneers when they broke new ground in the wilderness, which was raised by our fighters for freedom in the last World War in all battlefields, which was hoisted over the walls of the ghetto of Warsaw in that desperate rebellion—this flag, which has been a rallying point for the forces of Jewish people struggling to achieve their liberation in our ancestral home, is now marking our full emancipation, has now been raised proudly as the fifty-ninth flag in this great circle, symbolizing the aspirations and unity of mankind."

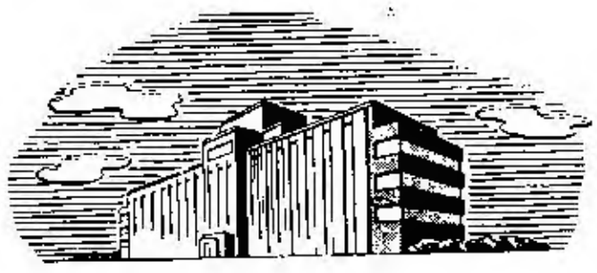
Tribute Everlasting



The Jewish General Hospital is now conducting its Building Completion Campaign.

The growth of the community, increased hospital services, new scientific developments and the heightened cost of construction have made necessary an additional $745,000 in order to complete the buildings now under way. In common with all hospitals, the Jewish General Hospital is today functioning under stress—overcrowding, long waiting lists, and abnormal demands on its facilities must be eliminated if the Hospital is to fulfill its great obligations.

The Jewish General Hospital is a Tribute Everlasting to those who helped bring about its being and to those who have sustained it through the years. It is non-sectarian, and offers aid to all who enter its doors. It stands today, as it will in the years ahead, as a proud symbol of the community's contribution to the welfare of mankind.
